and III

Encl: (1) Edward Rhodes Stitt Library Journal List
(2) List of Regional Medical Libraries

1. Purpose. To establish a Navy Medical Library Network (NAVMEDLIBNET) Program available to all naval Medical Department facilities including all types of providers of medical or dental care, research institutes and laboratories, environmental health centers, disease vector centers, schools and training activities, occupational health and preventive medicine units, and information management centers. Additionally, this instruction prescribes cost-effective guidelines for optimal services through coordination of library support available within Navy Medicine and other health service agencies.

2. Cancellation. NAVMEDCOMINST 5070.2.

3. Discussion. This instruction provides general policies and procedures to direct and manage library functions to assure the provision of quality services with maximum efficiency and economy of operation. Levels of responsibility are established to coordinate the program of medical library management. Quality library support is critical for sustaining and improving Navy health care. Medical libraries are responsible for providing resource materials and services appropriate to the requirements of medical centers and medical treatment facilities (MTFs). The best performance of this mission occurs when libraries exist not only within the organizational structure, but also as integral components of biomedical community library information networks. Maximum participation in a network provides the best library service possible with funding available.

4. Levels of Responsibility. The following levels of responsibility are assigned to implement specific requirements:

a. Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. The Special Assistant for Management Information Systems (MED-09D), will serve as the primary authority for the Navy medical library program. Additionally, through the NAVMEDLIBNET Program Director, MED-09D will provide guidance in library materials-collection development to those facilities that lack professional library staff.

b. Program Director. To optimize library and information support for all aspects of NAVMEDLIBNET, the program is coordinated by the Director of the Edward Rhodes Stitt Library, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, MD 20889-5600. The Edward Rhodes Stitt Library will provide copy service for all facilities of Navy Medicine from its collection (enclosure (1)), and distribute via mail or electronic transmission when possible. These services may be obtained by calling commercial (301) 295-1184, Defense Switched Network (DSN) 295-1184, or FAX (301) 295-6001. The NAVMEDLIBNET director is available for assistance or consultation on any matter relating to library service or operations at commercial (301) 295-2325, DSN 295-2325, or FAX (301) 295-6001, or contact the regional medical library in your area as listed in enclosure (2).

c. Commanders, Commanding Officers, and Officers in Charge

(1) Each command is required to meet JCAHO standards for professional library services commensurate with the level of health care provided. All facilities required to meet JCAHO standards for professional library services may obtain guidance in reference (a).

(2) Each command is required to identify the inter-relationship between the medical library and other components within the command and reflect it in the overall structure. Library services shall be directed at facilities by a library officer or qualified librarian, where available. At facilities having one or more library staff full-time equivalents (FTEs) (see paragraph 5c(1) for definition of FTEs), the library shall be a department under the director for administration and, wherever feasible, have its own operating target (OPTAR). The medical library program shall be administered and managed by the Graduate Medical Education Committee, or a committee established per reference (b).

5. Levels of Resources and Services

a. Facilities without library staff shall provide a central location for all available media, including audiovisual, easily accessible to all patrons; provide adequate security measures;

achieve return of all loaned materials; liaison with other local agencies and activities to accomplish cost-effective procurement of printed or electronic informational materials; maintain a database of locally available holdings; provide to Edward Rhodes Stitt Library by 1 January of each year any changes in holdings to facilitate resource sharing and identify materials that are duplicate, available for redistribution, or otherwise in need of disposal; and, provide timely response to library service inquiries and requests for information from upper echelon commands.

b. Facilities with part-time staff shall perform the duties in paragraph 6a, maintain advisory library committee, order and process library materials for logical shelf arrangement, and ensure that prepaid materials are received.

c. Facilities with One or More Library Staff

(1) FTE-staffed libraries shall employ a library head who is a qualified medical librarian with a graduate degree in library science from an American Library Association-accredited library school and certified by the Medical Library Association, if feasible, or a qualified administrator with equivalent education or experience; provide training of library staff and adequate clerical support; and support coordination by the major Navy medical library head when more than one medical library exists locally.

(2) The staff shall perform all library-related administrative tasks; write, update, and implement the library's policies and procedures; procure collections that meet staff needs; bind, catalog, and classify materials as required; provide reference services, literature searches, and materials check-out; maintain records and library statistics; issue reports (i.e., new acquisitions); seek economies and efficiencies as may be found through active participation in interlibrary loan and electronic and photo duplication as available through NAVMEDLIBNET and resources obtainable through other agencies and organizations. Interlibrary cooperation and sharing arrangements shall be documented in writing.

6. Procurement Procedures

a. Activities may procure appropriate health-related professional and technical books and journals without further approval by MED-09D. Materials may be in electronic media format, such as CD-ROM. Activities must submit purchase requests for periodicals directly to the appropriate Navy purchasing office. Journal and periodical subscriptions should be placed on a 2- or 3-year basis to take advantage of customarily lower multiyear subscription rates.

BUMEDINST 5070.5

26 Dec 95

b. Navy and Department of Defense publications may be procured following references (c) and (d).

c. The General Services Administration (GSA), Federal Supply Service, periodically makes open-end contracts for procurement of professional and technical books and journals in health care fields. Procurement of such items by naval activities must be under the provisions of these contracts. Reference (e) provides a list of GSA contracts and guidelines.

d. Subscriptions for professional and technical materials are purchased under local authority from funds provided by the major claimant in the expense operating budget.

7. Action. Effective immediately, all facilities associated with or serving Navy Medicine will provide professional medical library services for their command and subordinates through cooperative efforts as specified.
